The Coast Guard officers have filed a complaint with the Department of Commerce, which can revoke the man's license and impose a fine of $500. The complaint states that the man ignored the orders of the officers and was enabled to get across the course by the superior speed of his craft. It was announced yesterday that the organisation of the new company is nearly completed. It is expected that the regiment will go to camp. The guard is to have a troop of cavalry, four companies of coast artillery, and two additional batteries of field artillery.
